

AVIAN VETS BY STATE AND INTERNATIONAL

List compiled by Jeannine Miesle from AAV website, veterinary and member recommendations

ABVP= Board Certified Avian

*I know personally or know of their work

Recommended by my avian vet. I am still working to get more recommendations from him.

Below each state/country is the listing of emergency vet clinics that people have sent me. Please check with your own vet to find out what his emergency policy is and which emergency clinic he recommends if he is not available.

Disclaimer: All of the vets listed either have ABVP after their names or belong to a group that serves avian and exotic animals. I do not know them, so I cannot recommend any except for those with an asterisk. I suggest you go into the AAV website yourself, click on "Find a Vet," put in your state, and look at all the vets in the state. Click on each vet yourself and look them up on their internet websites to see if they treat birds, how experienced they are, etc. Just because a vet is not listed on this list does not mean he isn't a good avian vet. I only included those with the above descriptions. Certification is indeed a plus; however, many fine avian vets are not certified but have years of experience, and many certified avian vets are recent graduates without experience. You have to do your homework and make the phone calls and research them on the internet.

The date at the end is their date of graduation from vet school. AAV conventions means they are active in the organization and attend the conventions.

Specialists

There are no avian "specialists" as such, but some veterinarians have taken an interest in a particular field, studied it, written about it, and take on many patients with that ailment. The following clinicians are ones I know of that have done this and are now known for their knowledge and experience in these areas. You can look in the listing below for more information about them. As I find more I will add them and republish.

Attila Molnar: Calabasas. I would never take my bird to this vet. Not only does he charge incredibly high fees, he has many lawsuits and complaints against him. I personally know a woman who took her bird to him and all he did was make crude, sexually charged comments to her. She went back a second time and the same thing happened. Before you go, read this.

For bird owners in India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Indonesia, and other mid-eastern countries: My contacts in these countries state that none of the vets is experienced in avian medicine. (The exception is Rina Dev in India.) People in these countries are encouraged to not let the vet perform any surgeries or other procedures on their birds. Contact Jaime Samour in Abu Dhabi, UAE for any treatments. The other vets may or may not be willing to consult with Dr. Samour for testing and treatments.

Dr, Samour contact information: jaimesamour@hotmail.com. See his name under “UAE, Abu Dhabi” for more information.

Also, this clinic does consultations with individuals and veterinarians from these countries.

Long Beach Animal Hospital: The following veterinarians work with people from countries where there is no vet, particularly the Mideast and Asian countries.

Pakistan: This list was given to me by the Pakistan Avicultural Foundation. However, none are qualified or experienced avian vets. Take your birds to them at your own risk. My vet recommends Dr. Jaime Samour in UAE, Abi Dhabi. See “UAE, Abu Dhabi” for contact information.

This clinic offers consultations with vets and individuals from countries without avian vets:

Long Beach Animal Hospital: The following veterinarians work with people from countries where there is no vet, particularly the Asian countries.

Listing of Karachi veterinary doctors: from Habib Ur Rehman Sherani:

Although Habib has sent me this list, I would be very careful about having any of these vets work with my birds. I know nothing about any of them. None appears to be familiar enough with the birds to treat them. Contact Habib for more information.

Use the vets above at Long Beach, or Drs. Jaime Samour
